

The Glasgow Naturalist
Volume 23, Supplement, 2001

CONTENTS

Page
1	Foreword.	Aubrey Manning
	Full Papers
2	Alien vascular plants in Scotland: concepts and consequences - Scotland no Hawai'i James H. Dickson	James H. Dickson
13	Alien mammals: wreaking havoc or missing the boat?	Andrew C. Kitchener
23	When aliens meet: European rabbits and American viruses in Australia, and in the World.	Norman R. Grist .
26	Introduced freshwater invertebrates in Scotland: enhanced biodiversity or a threat to native species?	Peter S. Maitland & Colin E. Adams
35	Invasion and establishment of freshwater fish populations in Scotland: the experience of the past and lessons for the future.	Colin E. Adams & Peter S. Maitland
44	Alien aquatic plants in Britain	Lynne Farrell
48	The invasion and impact of alien mitten crabs and crayfish in the UK	Roni Robbins & Phil Rainbow
52	Figs, Japanese knotweed and Himalayan balsam enhance the urban ecology of Sheffield	Oliver Gilbert
57	Alien insects in Scotland	E. G. Hancock
66	Sitka spruce plantations in Scotland: friend or foe to biodiversity?	Jonathan Humphrey & Chris Quine
77	The invasion of New Zealand flatworms	Hugh D. Jones & Brian Boag
84	Exotic species, science and society	John Hopkins
91	The ruddy duck and the white-headed duck: the case for ruddy duck population control in the UK	Paul Walton
99	Controlling ruddy ducks: the case against	Iain Gibson
103	The introduction of the beaver	Alastair Sommerville
108	Afterword	Christopher Smout
111	From and for the Society's picture archives	T.N. Tait